Yes, but it depends on where you live. Many electric utility companies offer rebate dollars for customers who install window film. It takes just a little homework to find out which utility companies participate in incentive programs. You can learn more at www.energy.gov/savings.

For commercial buildings, window film installation may also help you attain LEED credits and potential certification. Leadership in Energy & Environmental Design, or LEED, is a highly-recognized green building certification program. Learn more at www.usgbc.org/certification.
